

Mirror, mirror

I always end up doing my make-up on the train, and now I have a really horrible, scratched, dirty little compact. So if I'm doing my make-up in public I'd like to have a nice one! I'd really love a little rose-gold, folding compact mirror.

Emma, mum to Jack, 18 months; mamalina.co

Charlotte Tilbury Norman Parkinson Dreamy Glow Highlighter compact, £45, johnlewis.com

All I want for Christmas

SOME OF GURGLE'S FAVOURITE MUMMY BLOGGERS TELL KATHERINE PRICE WHAT'S ON THEIR WISH LISTS THIS YEAR

Canon EOS 5D Mark III, £2,249, jessops.com

Snap happy

If money was no object, it would be the Canon 5D Mark III. I take a picture of the family every month – all too often mums don't get in front of the camera, plus it's so lovely to see how the children have grown and changed. I'll probably put them all together in a photobook from Snapfish.

Alex, mum to Ethan, two and Logan, six months; bump-to-baby.com

Peace out

I'd like a beautifully designed, cosy chair from made.com to go by the fireplace, that would be my chair. No grubby little fingers would be allowed near it! It'd be my quiet corner – the one place in the house not overrun with toys.

Molly, mum to two girls, aged five and one; mothersalwaysright.com

Quentin armchair, £299, made.com

Saucony Shadow Original, £80, saucony.co.uk

RUNNING LATE

I want Saucony Shadow Original trainers – I used to always ask for some kind of crazy pair of heels for Christmas, but since becoming a mum I only ever wear trainers. It's all about pimping up your trainer wardrobe! I call them my 'mama tyres' because I run to places when I'm late, which is always. It's my exercise!

Anna, mum to Mae, two; motherpukka.co.uk

House of Marbles snakes and ladders vintage-style board game, £9.99, johnlewis.com

Vintage playtime

I think we spend far too much time on technology, so for Christmas some good old-fashioned family games would be nice – things that we can all play and build together. Basically anything that means the kids have to sit down and pay attention, and gets us away from the screens.

Emily, mum to two kids, aged eight and four; amummytoo.co.uk

Smart thinking

Number one on my list is All Saints Elm leather trousers.

You may be a mum, but you've still got to step it up in the style department! I imagine they're super-practical for having kids as well, because they're probably very wipeable.

Clemmie, mum to boys aged two and one; motherofalllists.com

Elm leather trousers, £498, allsaints.com

ON THE CARDS

Sarah Baily makes a nice pink-and-gold travel card wallet. When you're going out and you've not got the kids, a massive bag and 'mum purse' with hundreds of cards and receipts in, it's nice to have something that's just got a few cards and a tenner in. Steph, mum to Buster, five and Mabel, three; dontbuyherflowers.com

Travel card wallet, £30, sarahbaily.com

Invati System, £91.50, aveda.co.uk

Hair-raising

I'm really, really liking Aveda products at the moment. I lost quite a bit of hair post-baby, and it was recommended that I use the Aveda Invati System to try to thicken my hair up. It totally worked. It's absolutely brilliant!

Susie, mum to Milo, one; mymiloandme.com

Re: cycle

If money was no object I'd go for the Christiania Maxi bike from London Green Cycles. I'd put the kids in it and go cycling every day along the beach. Sandbanks is at the end of our road – we often get the wide beach there to ourselves.

Chloe, mum to two girls, 11 and four, and two boys, ten and two; uberkid.net

Christiania Maxi bike, from £1,601, londongreencycles.co.uk